Our Approach

SVS's approach to development is based upon participatory principles at the community level. It is believed that overall development of the communities cannot be achieved by single hands, thus to ensure the benefits of holistic development to reach the poor, it is necessary that the different development actors play conclusive roles at grass root level.

SVS's based on its capacities and its experience has chosen to work for reducing illiteracy and promoting sustainable livelihood practices involving the beneficiaries and other stakeholders. The decisive role of the society will be to work in harmony with all stakeholders and build sustainable process in the communities and link them with governance structures.

By working on systemic issues that can bring about a multiplier change, we try to integrate the developmental issues and improve the conditions of the vulnerable individuals and households. We believe that an educated individual is more capable in taking decisions and improve livelihood conditions of self and household, thus acting simultaneously on both the factors has larger positive impacts on the society and community in whole. We realize, we are an external agent to the communities and our role is to trigger the development process and wait till the process are adopted and integrated in the system. Thus we believe in change for better tomorrow.
